The Albert and Doree Abramson Story

Albert Abramson was an accounting professor from 1950 to 1981 and his wife, Doree Abramson, was a professor in the Office Administration Department from 1963 to 1983. They both loved the students of Los Angeles City College and embraced their faculty associates as both friends and colleagues.

The Abramsons believed in accessible and affordable higher education for all who sought the promise of a brighter future; this goal became their lifelong endeavor.
